

I would like to congratulate the NIEHS for moving toward reducing the number of animals killed for scientific research. Please continue your move away from the LD50 tests and continue efforts to use in-vitro methods for assessing the acute systemic toxicity for certain chemicals. Ultimately, it would be nice to see you completely replace lethal dose testing with non-animal, in vitro testing methods.

Sincerely,

Sherry Brewington